A BUSY YEAR FOR MNCPPC; AGENCY EXPANDS STAFF, BUDGET, PLANT

by David Stern

The year 1966 has been one of great growth for the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission (MNCPPC). Not only has it grown to be a major agency in the county's development, with an annual budget exceeding $15,000,000 and about 5,000 acres of parkland, it also has acquired during the year a new chairman, a new executive director and a new head office for Prince Georges County.

The new chairman, W. C. ("Bud") Dutton, replaced William J. Stevens in June. Dutton had previously served three years as staff director of the National Capital Planning Commission and has also been Executive Director of the American Institute of Planners. The new executive director is B. Houston McCeney, a 42-year-old Silver Spring attorney and former county commissioner who succeeded to the $23,000 post on November 1. He replaced Jesse F. Nicholson, who retired following 19 years of service. McCeney had been the commission's chief legal officer for several years.

The new headquarters at 6600 Kenilworth Ave. was opened shortly before Christmas. It will help house the commission's growing staff, slated to increase from 123 in mid-1966 to about 200, so as to meet the county's growing needs.

New Parks

The increase in the size of the technical staff is one reason for the record $15,836,929 budget adopted by MNCPPC for fiscal 1967. The budget also provides $2.4 million to acquire 1174 acres of parkland in Prince Georges County, with a comparable outlay for Montgomery County. This will bring the county's park acreage to about 6,000, including two regional parks — the Clinton park in the southern section of the county, scheduled for opening this year, and the Robert M. Watkins park, located in the county's mid-section near Largo and yet undeveloped. To finance this budget, a tax of 21 cents per $100 assessed valuation has been authorized; this includes a 14-cent park tax from which Greenbelt, which maintains its own parkland, is exempt.

The MNCPPC also approved in December, by a 6-3 vote, the establishment of a National Armed Forces Museum Park on 610 acres south of the Wilson bridge. (Approval by local planners is not essential for such a project, but is given considerable weight.) There has been less agreement, however, regarding another federally supported project in the same locality, namely, the section of the George Washington Memorial Parkway between Wilson Bridge and Fort Washington.

This is to be the last section of a pair of scenic highways flanking the Potomac in the National Capital area. The Federal Government, which pays for the parkway and matches funds for the land on which it is constructed, insists that the route follow the river bank, as it does in other sections already built.

In late 1965, MNCPPC released the Southern Potomac Master Plan covering the area, by which the parkway was shifted inland. Since then, the issue has become the subject of a bitter controversy: the Federal Government has refused to accept an inland route, while the Maryland Legislature, when approving the $2,900,000 bond issue for purchasing the land, attached a rider to preclude a shoreline route. For a time it seemed as if a compromise would be achieved, but the latest rezoning recommendations of MNCPPC run counter to this hope.

Planning for Development
The drafting of master plans to map the growth of suburban areas has been one of the important duties of MNCPPC. A master plan for the large Fairland-Beltsville area (partially located in Montgomery County) was released in 1966, as have been plans for Bowie, Lanham-Seabrook, Landover Rd. and Suitland-District Heights (a revised plan), as well as a staff study of the Largo-Lottsford area.

Other plans are in preparation. However, the master plan for area 13, which includes Greenbelt, has not been heard of since July 1965, when the county commissioners rejected it and returned it to MNCPPC for revision and reduction of population densities.

Though the drafting of master plans is a conspicuous activity of MNCPPC, much of its effort is devoted to the chore of examining zoning petitions and recommending on them to the county commissioners prior to zoning hearings. Early in 1966 it seemed as if the planners would never catch up with their backlog of nearly 800 petitions, and the commissioners suspended the filing of new petitions during January 1966, one of the two annual filing periods. By the time the second annual period arrived, in July 1966, the planners had whittled away much of the backlog and were ready for the 421 new petitions that were filed. The commissioners did not find it necessary to repeat the suspension in January this year.

Not much of this activity affected land in Greenbelt. On August 24, the planners rejected a request to rezone parcel 7, adjacent to Boxwood Village, from R-55 (single family dwellings) to C-1 (restricted commercial). The petition still has to go before the commissioners, however, and the developers, Charles Bresler and Associates, have meanwhile stripped the land of its forest cover. On the same occasion the planners approved commercial zoning on adjacent parcel 8, a request which was denied by the commissioners on October 12.

A month later, the planning board recommended 27 acres of R-18 garden apartments and 5 acres C-1 for controversial parcel 15, which had been proposed as a high school site. No action has been taken on this petition so far.

Legislative Progress

In spite of great expectations at the beginning of 1966, very little legislation concerning MNCPPC, or zoning and planning in general, was passed by the Maryland Assembly in its 1966 session. A bill which would have established "conditional zoning," binding developers to the plans they submit when applying for rezoning, was killed by the senate. Another, which would have laid down the framework for the drafting of master plans, did not even reach the voting stage.

A controversial proposal by Senator Fred Wineland to strip the county commissioners of their zoning power and hand it to a special zoning board did not pass, either.

Locally, a new category of townhouse zoning won approval. Also, an ordinance giving tax benefits in return for scenic easements was adopted in an impressive ceremony, held at Mt. Vernon. Despite the publicity, however, little use has been made of it up to now.

Appeal Bond Denied

The latest development in the Charlestown Village covenant case took place late last month, when Prince Georges Circuit Court denied a motion filed by Charles Bresler and associates, developers of Charlestown Village. The motion requested that the city of Greenbelt post an appeal (supersedes) bond to cover possible damages resulting from the appeal filed by the city before the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The city had appealed a decision by the lower court by which covenants and agreements entered into by Bresler on April 1962 were not legally enforceable, since they were conditioned upon the city's making favorable zoning recommendations. The covenants had called for limiting the density of the 50-acre Charlestown Village tract to seven units per acre and for construction to be in conformity with R-30 zoning, which prohibits high-rise apartments.

PG Community College Registration Deadline

The last day for filing an application to Prince Georges Community College for the spring semester is Monday, Jan. 16. Applications submitted after that date will be subject to a late application fee and will be accepted only as space permits.

Classes begin February 7.

For further information, write or telephone the Director of Admissions, Prince Georges Community College, 5000 Silver Hill Road, Suitland, Maryland 20028, telephone 735-4400.

Xmas Decoration Winners

First prize in the "house and yard display" category was won by the Kenneth Keeneys of 33 Lakeside. The H. Arthur Lincks 55-F Ridge, won second prize in the same category. In the "window display" category, the Keith Petroffs, 20 Lakeside won first prize. Second prize in the window category was won by the Vane Glendenings at 101 Rosewood Drive.

The City was well decorated for the holidays. The North End and Lakeside areas had the greatest number of decorations. In the older sections of the City, entire courts were decorated.

WINTER SWIM CLASSES

Following a well attended first session of winter swimming classes, a second session is now being organized. Classes, which are held on Sunday evening from 6 to 7 at Columbia Union College, Takoma Park, are arranged by the Greenbelt Swimming Team. A few vacancies are expected, which will be available for interested children who are not team members. The first class of the new series of 12 lessons will be held on January 19. The series will end sometime in May.

For information concerning fees, car pools, and other arrangements, call Mrs. Jeanne Jones, 474-6001, or Mrs. Marian Klukowski, 474-2556.

MEDICARE MOVIE NEXT WEDNESDAY

A color sound film, explaining all about Medicare, will be shown next Wednesday, Jan. 11, at 1 p.m. at the Youth Center. The showing of this film by the Golden Age Club is a community effort to inform interested people about how Medicare is administered and who is eligible.

Everyone is welcome to come and see this film; it is not just for Golden Age members. Admission is free. For information, call 474-7206.

Ode to a Carpenter . . .

. . . constructing University Square Apartments at 7 a.m. on New Year's Day.

O, Carpenter, Can't you stay your hammer,

Which keeps us from much needed slumber.

We planned to sleep late on New Year's morn,

For only at Three did we silence the horn.

We hoped for a New Year full of hope and cheer,

But your hammering has rekindled the fear

That developers shrewd and officials small

Will continue to bring on our city's fall,

From a town which children and adults enjoyed

To a nightmare of apartments and traffic conjoined.

So put away your hammer and go home to rest,

And we of Greenbelt will wish you the best!

LET'S UNITE OUR CHURCHES NOW!

Because the oneness of the Church is not merely a spiritual fellowship that men may accept or reject at will. It is given by God, who gives the Church. The New Testament tells again and again that the Church is one body with one head, Jesus Christ.

That is why the United Church of Christ is deeply involved in seeking church union. On the very day that the United Church was formed in 1957 (by a union of the Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed Churches) our General Synod called for "the elimination of useless and hurtful separation within the greater Church." Today we are laboring with eight other denominations in the Consultation on Church Union to plan a single Church that will be "truly catholic, truly reformed and truly evangelical."

But we also believe that the mission of Jesus Christ cannot wait for formal church union. Already our United Church Board for World Ministries carries on 85 percent of its work overseas in cooperation with older churches. Our Board for Homeland Ministries recently voted not to begin any new programs by itself, if they can be done cooperatively with other churches.

In Kansas City, Mo., we are joining with United Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Roman Catholics to build and share a unique inner-city church. In Schellsburg, Pa., we helped four small churches to unite in one strong congregation. In the Detroit suburb of Trenton the United Church and the United Presbyterian Church have united. Throughout the country there are many other hopeful signs of church unity.

Therefore, we hope and pray that communions in the Consultation on Church Union can unite our missions — and our churches — NOW!

Students Participate in Field Trips

by Laura Rixon

To broaden and enrich the school's curriculum, Greenbelt Junior high has developed a field trip program to meet the needs of each grade level.

The program, begun eight years ago, was an outgrowth of the eighth grade U.S. history course which emphasizes colonial history to the Civil War. It was felt by teachers, that early American customs, culture, thought, and history could be better understood if the students were permitted to see and to touch the colonial American world. Williamsburg with nearby Jamestown was the logical choice.

Here, clustered in nostalgic splendor, Williamsburg—the "heart of Colonial America", invites the student to wander down 17th Century streets restored as if one stepped into yesterday. There are ideas about medicine, fashions, education, government, religion, and justice to ponder. Williamsburg is living history. It gives meaning and definition to dusty, but important principles upon which our country rests.

For ninth graders, the field trip program travels north into the modern 20th Century with a stop at the very center of its energy, New York City. The United Nations tour, with its international guides, exposes the teenage throng to the conflicts and consternations of a turbulent planet in change.

To complete an already enriched field trip program, the seventh grade was offered a trip to Jefferson's Monticello, Skyline Drive, and the Luray Caverns. Monticello is the highlight of this tour with its dazzling display of the oval gardens, the seven-day clock, and the beds built into the walls. Luray Caverns supplements the earth sciences program with a journey through nature's underground rock splendor.

All of these trips have been made possible as a service to the students and community of Greenbelt through the cooperative efforts of the teachers and administration of Greenbelt Junior. It is hoped that this program can extend the educational effort of the school beyond the confines of the classroom.

Explorer Post

An Explorer Post has been organized under the sponsorship of Greenbelt Junior High School. Mr. Roger Ayers and Mr. Kurt Porchen are serving as sponsors with assistance from Mr. Reginald Rose, Scout Executive for Prince Georges County. A field trip to Andrews Air Force Base and a canoeing trip have been planned for the near future.

Gymkana Club

For the first time in Greenbelt Junior High History there is a Gymkana Club. This organization gives the students an opportunity to perform on various gymnastic equipment such as trampoline, horse, balance beam, etc. The thirty-six members, headed by Mrs. Imogene McCleary, hope to improve their skills and possibly perform in a program for the PTA during the year.

Principal's Honor Roll

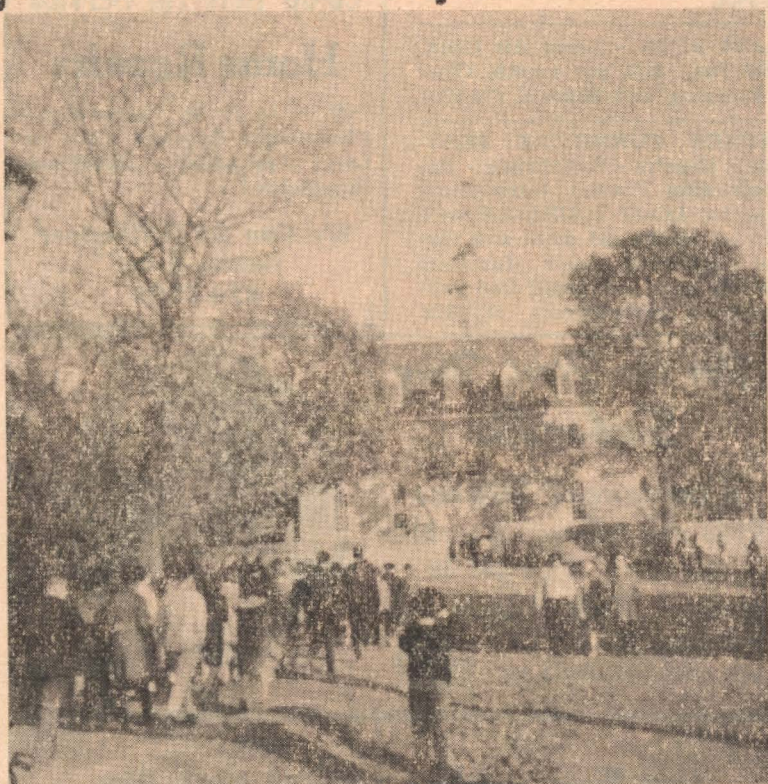

The following students achieved a 4.0 rating or higher: Sue Risinger (9th grade), Marie Pinches (8th grade) and David Ameen (8th grade)

STUDENTS TOUR ANNAPOLIS IN STUDY OF STATE GOVERNMENT

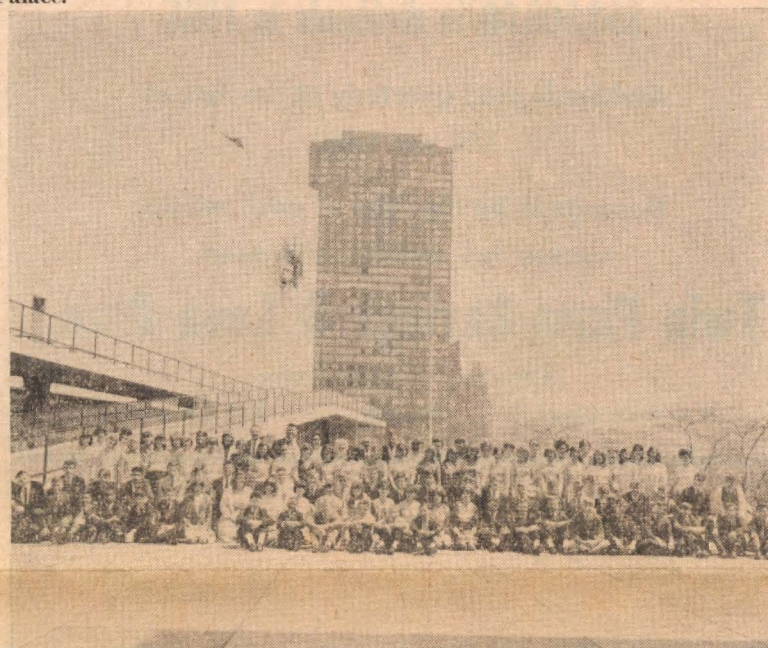

To begin the study of Maryland's state government, Peter Whittaker's 9-A civics class under the direction of Miss Virginia Guidara, student teacher, toured historic Annapolis on December 8.

Arrangements were for a visit to Comptroller Louis Goldstein's office to inspect the state's new IBM machinery used to expedite the processing of Maryland's income tax returns.

Other highlights of the tour included a visit to the State Court of Appeals, Maryland's Supreme Court, the historic capitol building and a peek at the selection of a jury at a county court session.

Eighth graders visit Williamsburg, Va., here approaching Governor's Palace.

Ninth Grade students in front of United Nations building on New York City tour.

Seventh graders pose in Luray Caverns on trip that also included Monticello.

School Improvements

The students of Greenbelt Junior High found their school much improved this September. The girls' locker room has been completely remodeled. New lockers, a non-skid, tile floor, and freshly painted walls are a few new features. Special consideration was given to the selection of a green and beige color scheme, which does much to brighten the atmosphere.

To accommodate additional students a fourth industrial arts lab has been built. In addition, a third guidance office has been added so that each grade has its own guidance office.

As their contribution to the school grounds, the 1965-66 student council decided to erect a sign. The sign should be built sometime this school year and will add much to the appearance of the school.

Future plans for improvements are in the making and will be carried out as soon as possible.

Science Fair

Each year eighth and ninth grade students are required to complete a science project. Students may enter their project in the annual Greenbelt Junior High School Science Fair. Each project is placed in one of over a dozen categories. Professors and scientists from nearby universities and research centers judge each project. First, second, and third place winners are chosen in each category. Many educational departments also give awards to outstanding projects. Ten projects are selected by the faculty to enter the area science fair held at the University of Maryland.

350-400 students are expected to enter the 15th Annual science fair. All projects must be set-up in the gymnasium between 7:30 A.M. and 5:00 P.M. on Friday, March 3rd. Judging will be held March 4th from 9:00 A.M. until noon. The public is invited to view the fair Saturday evening from 6 P.M. to 10 P.M. and Sunday afternoon from 3:00 - 5:00 P.M.

Pylon Wins National Recognition

by Maxine Sarvis

In its first bid for national recognition, PYLON '66, Greenbelt Junior's yearbook, placed second in the thirty-second annual yearbook critique contest sponsored by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, Columbia University, New York.

Out of a total possible 1000 points, Pylon scored 815 - just short of a first place rank. The book was rated on its design, layout, content, coverage and supervision.

The Columbia Scholastic Press Association judges yearbooks from all over the nation. It is considered to be the outstanding national authority on just what constitutes the typical yearbook. Columbia Scholastic Press Association awards are the most coveted by high school and college yearbook staffs from coast to coast. In Columbia's judgement, "Pylon is an outstanding yearbook for its size and type."

Editor-in-chief of the 1966 PYLON was Greg Pontius. His assistant was Marylynn Chandler.

The 1967 PYLON will add even more novel and exciting features. Just for a teaser, PYLON will add 8 more pages for a grand total of 96 pages. Greenbelt's yearbook has been and is the largest yearbook of its kind in Prince George's county.

Teacher Honored

by Martha Rosen

Mr. C. Steven Bittner, ninth grade social studies and English teacher, has been selected by the Board of Education to represent Prince Georges county at the Forty-Sixth Annual Meeting of the National Council for the Social Studies in Cleveland, Ohio. The week-long session will feature "Civic Education for a Changing World" as its theme.

The first two days of Mr. Bittner's week-long schedule includes visitations to local Cleveland junior high schools. Demonstrations in team teaching, block time, and innercity classes are to be observed. These school visits will show what Cleveland offers ninth graders in such special subject areas as comparative government, geography, economics, and the humanities. The remainder of the week will be devoted to attending meetings and listening to speeches related to the social studies curriculum.

Mr. Bittner has taught social studies at Greenbelt Junior High for 5 years. This past summer, he was instrumental in developing and teaching a four-week experimental American history enrichment program for academically-talented eighth grade students. The highlight of the course was a week-long tour of historical New England under the direction of Mr. Peter Whittaker, also a Greenbelt Junior teacher. The program received county-wide recognition and acclaim. This year the course will be expanded and instituted as a permanent part of the educational service offered by the Prince George's county Board of Education.

Other activities that engage Mr. Bittner's time include supervising student teachers from the University of Maryland, being Vice President of Greenbelt Junior's PTA, Chairman of Greenbelt Junior's social studies department, faculty representative to the Prince Georges county Teachers Association, and advisor to PYLON, Greenbelt Junior's yearbook.

Rep. Machen Speaks

Representative Hervey Machen, Democratic congressman from Maryland's fifth congressional district spoke to Mr. Bittner's 9-E civics class under the direction of Michael Shattersley, student teacher, on "The Changing Washington Metropolitan Area."

The talk was given in connection with the class' study of America's sprawling urban areas. Congressman Machen concerned his talk with the Washington area's rapid growth and the problems this has presented to the local, state, and federal governments.

For the first time, the new 1967 edition will be wrapped in a hard cover. Colors for this year's annual are burgundy with white trim.

"Faces in the Crowd" is the theme this year. A theme is the journalistic technique used to tell the story of the school year.

Inclusion of the boy's and the girl's intramural sporting events will be added. To balance the book's coverage, a new academic section featuring the school's curriculum is planned.

In order to include spring activities in the yearbook, Pylon has instituted a new policy for coverage of these important events such as the awards assembly, spring trips, and spring sports. PYLON'S editions will cover the school's activities from spring to spring. A March printing deadline prevents the book from including these activities. Under the new policy, these events will appear in the following year's annual to present the total school year.

Yet the biggest surprise is still to come! PYLON will make a major addition this year which is not featured in any other yearbook PYLON'S size. It is so exciting and different, the editorial staff decided not to release the news publicly until PYLON arrives in June. But it is a super treat to watch for when the book comes.

Sue Risinger heads the PYLON staff for 1967. Cathy Toyfoya is her assistant editor. Mr. Bittner, ninth grade civics and English teacher advises PYLON.

Stombaugh Awarded Most Valuable Player

Paul Stombaugh has received the "1966 Most Valuable Baseball Player in Prince George's County" award.

George Selkirk, general manager of the Washington Senators presented the plaque to this Greenbelt Junior High ninth grader at a special banquet given in his honor at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, D. C. Paul is one of four recipients in the Washington Metropolitan Area, and the only one from Prince George's County, to receive such recognition. Other VIP's on hand to congratulate Paul Stombaugh were Pete Richert, pitcher for the Senators, and Gil Hodges, Washington Senator's Manager.

During the summer, Paul played on several area metropolitan baseball teams. He is an all-around player, but third base, outfield, catcher, and pitcher are his favorite positions.

Report Card Time

Just as in everything else, the computer has come to education and Greenbelt Junior. Something as simple as issuing a report card is a monumental task for today's huge student population. For this reason, IBM punch cards are used to expedite this important job.

There are four grading periods each academic year. Just before the grading period closes, teachers compute their grades for their particular classes. Then, they begin the process known as "sorting." Each student has a grade card for each of his subjects. The subject teachers simply place the student's grade card behind the grade master card which the student earned.

Then these cards, along with those that the office collects on attendance, are fed into a huge IBM sorter at High Point High School. Proof sheets are printed for each teacher to check his grades.

When all of these proof sheets have been checked, the IBM sorter is ordered to print report cards and other data needed for administrative use. The IBM sorter can print 55 cards a minute. This seems fast, but newer high speed equipment is planned for the future to serve the needs of an ever increasing school population.

Finally, the report cards are returned to Greenbelt Junior for distribution to the anxious students.
